Kelvingrove Park, also known as West End Park, is a well laid-out area of 91½ acres acquired by the Corporation in 1852, and added to from time to time. The walks and drives were designed by Sir Joseph Paxton. The University, situated on Gilmorehill, was designed by Sir G. Gilbert Scott, the foundation stone being laid by the King, then Prince of Wales, in 1868. The buildings are in the form of a quadrangle, and are surmounted by a handsome tower and spire 150 feet high.
